19.15 – 22.00 Lecture I Michael Eigen:

Hope's Vanishing Point: The Last Scream and Madness X

Both Winnicott and Bion write of a point where the scream vanishes and new sorts of madness begin. Winnicott speaks of a last point of hope and Bion traces one's entry to oblivion. Using the chapter, "Scream", from his book, Rage, Dr. Eigen will enter this domain and share some of its shadows. He writes, "The scream I delineate contains all screams, from infancy through adulthood, personal, familial, social, cosmic. It includes my own deepest scream that grows from the feeling of life itself and extends through my outrage at current political conditions.

All humanity shares aspects of this scream"

4th Annual Conference of TAICP

Friday June 13th, 2008

0900-1200 Lecture II Michael Eigen

Coming Through and the Annihilated Self

Each of us undergoes some kind of annihilation. Our lives go on over graveyards of the self. We search for ways to come through our own annihilation and ways to go around it or harden in face of it. Religious literature abounds with writings about coming alive in face of our own deadness and self-forgetfulness. We will see what psychoanalysis can add to this perennial journey and what coming through ourselves may mean.

1200 – 1400 Lunch Break

1400 - 1700 Lecture III Michael Eigen

Eigen will speak in detail about several of his cases and also analyze aspects of current political life. He will respond to questions on any topic of concern.
